You Want Milk's florally curious and ferally syncopated indie-rock-fusion grooves meld a variety of influences into their cohesive three-piece sound. Combining musical proficiency with a DIY ethos and a love for improvisation, their music twists and turns between the boundaries of math rock, jazz fusion, and neo-soul, remaining danceable throughout their unconventional song structures and surprising rhythmic shifts. They have a taste for the artfully wacky and like coming up with new ways to involve and entertain their audience.

Starting from their humble origins of playing Brooklyn basement shows, You Want Milk made their official debut at JetLAG Festival 2021 in the Catskills. Since then, they have played various New York City venues, such as Brooklyn Music Kitchen, Talon Bar, and Rockaway Brewing Company. You Want Milk self-released their first EP, Pretty Colors to Paint a Waterfall, on October 15th, 2021. They are currently working on recording their next album.

Matt Genkin (piano, bass, vocals) and Nathan Greenberg (guitar, bass, vocals) trade bass on various songs while the other leads with piano or guitar, and John Desmond (drums, vocals) plays drums.
